

IMPROVEMENT

It's the little things. Employees updating their own data, managers having access to departmental-specific information, Executive Directors accessing financial data on the weekend, the list could go on and on. It's the little things that make a big impact.

Looking at the systems and procedures that drive your organization, where can you improve efficiencies, processes, and accountability?

- Self-service empowers your teams –employees are held accountable and help eliminate procedural roadblocks
- Reports in the hands of your program managers – from program performance to grant management – correlates to improved decision-making

All the little improvements positively impact your organization's work flow and moral. When you reach this higher performance level, consider the impact this has on your organization and the constituents that benefit. Everyone becomes a better steward of your organization's mission.
